

fields of residential child care, community orientation and social work orientated to social policy which are three hotbeds of social work controversies in the last hundred years and provide new insights into these core issues of social work in order to develop a critical view on the identity and autonomy of social work today.

Commentator of the three papers: Susanne Maurer