Andrea Boscoboinik is Senior Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland. Her main current research subjects deal with the urbanization of rural spaces. Her latest research project focuses on lifestyle mobilities and the imaginaries of new populations living in mountain regions. Andrea has led fieldwork in Honduras, Bulgaria, Romania, the Spanish Pyrenees and the Swiss Alps.

Viviane Cretton is a social and cultural anthropologist and a full Professor at the University of Applied Sciences and Arts (HES-SO Valais-Wallis) in Western Switzerland. She leads ethnographic research projects in mountain areas, focusing on themes such as migration and mobility, interactions, and imaginaries. Currently, she is exploring the relationships between humans and non-human entities in mountain environments. Viviane has led fieldwork in the Fiji Islands, the Swiss Alps, the Spanish Pyrenees and South Tyrol.

Cristina Grasseni is Professor of Cultural Anthropology at Leiden University's Institute of Cultural Anthropology and Development Sociology. She specialises in economic, political and visual anthropology. Her ERC Consolidator grant Food Citizens? Collective Food Procurement in European Cities: Solidarity and Diversity, Skills and Scale (2017–2024) examined the different types, premises and consequences of alternative food networks in the Netherlands, Poland and Italy (www.foodcitizens.eu).

Werner Krauß is a cultural anthropologist who works in the field of political ecology, landscape studies and the anthropology of climate change. He conducted fieldwork in Switzerland, Portugal, Texas and at the coastlines of Eastern and Northern Friesland in Germany. Currently, his research focuses on the production of climate knowledge and the “rewriting” of European intertidal ecosystems in the Anthropocene.

Špela Ledinek Lozej holds a PhD in Ethnology and works at the Research Centre of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts (ZRC SAZU), Institute of Slovenian Ethnology. Her work focuses on heritage and heritage processes, alpine pasture, dwelling culture, and experimental ethnographic methodology. Since 2019 she leads the multidisciplinary research program Heritage on the Margins (see Heriscope, <https://dediscina.zrc-sazu.si/en/home2/>) and teaches at the Postgraduate School of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts.

Herta Nöbauer was Senior Lecturer at the Department of Social and Cultural Anthropology of the University of Vienna for many years and is retired now. Her main research interests were and still are focused on human-environment relations in the European Alps and the Alpine cryosphere in particular.

Anna Paini is Professor of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Verona and has carried out fieldwork in Oceania since 1989 among the Kanak of Lifou, New Caledonia. For the last decade she has done research in the Veneto region of Italy. Her main research interests include colonial history, women's protagonism, material and immaterial heritage, with a particular focus on textiles, and socio-cultural transformations linked to environmental-climatic changes. She has published in national and international academic journals.

Almut Schneider received her PhD in Social Anthropology from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (EHESS, Paris) for her research on exchanges, ritual, kinship and concepts of growth in the Highlands of Papua New Guinea (La vie qui vient d'ailleurs: Mouvements, échanges et rituels dans les Hautes Terres de la Papouasie-Nouvelle-Guinée, 2017). As a senior researcher, she has recently been working in South Tyrol and Switzerland, focusing on high-altitude farmers, human-environment interactions, agrarian connections with land, and most recently, on alpine grasslands and their relationships.

Valeria Siniscalchi is Professor of Anthropology at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) and member of the Research Center on circulations, links and exchanges (CeRCLEs, Marseille, France). Her research and teaching activities focus on economic and political anthropology, and food activism. She has done extensive research in northern and southern Italy, in the French Alps and inside the Slow Food movement. Her recent books include Food Activism. Agency, Democracy and Economy (2014, with Carole Counihan), Food Values in Europe (2019, with Krista Harper), and Slow Food. The economy and politics of a global movement (2023).

Elisabeth Tauber is Professor of Sociocultural Anthropology at the Faculty of Design and Art, Free University of Bolzano. She has done substantial ethnographic research with Sinti in Italy on marriage, death, gift economies and nomadism, and has delved into archival ethnography. She is currently working on extensive grasslands. In her paper (2024), Walking on Alpine Grass in Ethnos, she proposes ethnographing grass to reveal its global connections.

Pier Paolo Viazzo received his PhD from University College London. Professor Emeritus of Social Anthropology at the University of Turin, he has conducted ethnographic and archival research mostly in the western Italian Alps. He is the author of Upland Communities: Environment, Population and Social Structure in the Alps Since the Sixteenth Century (1989) and co-editor, with Andrea Membretti and Ingrid Kofler, of Per forza o per scelta. L'immigrazione straniera nelle Alpi e negli Appennini (2017).
